

STUDY COMPANION

Feel the Fear and Do It Anyway

Dr. Susan Jeffers

Important Insights + Action Guide

"Security is not having things — it's handling things."

THE CENTRAL QUESTION

What would you do if you knew you could handle anything that came your way?

THE AUTHOR'S ANSWER

Every fear, at bottom, is the same fear: "I can't handle it." Jeffers's answer is that fear is an educational problem, not a psychological one — and the cure is never to wait for the fear to go away. It won't, as long as you keep growing. Instead, you retrain your thinking, build trust in yourself through daily action, and hold your fear from a position of power rather than pain. Do the thing first; the confidence follows. Whatever happens: I'll handle it.

THE FRAMEWORK — FOUR MOVEMENTS

IThe Anatomy of Fear Chapters 1–3

What fear actually is — the three levels beneath every surface story, the five truths that end the waiting game, and the shift from pain to power.

IITaking Back the Controls Chapters 4–6

Reclaiming the inner controls — total responsibility for your experience of life, outtalking the chatterbox, and handling the people who liked the old you better.

IIIActing Without a Net Chapters 7–9

The action frameworks — decisions you can't lose, a life too whole to be devastated, and the yes that turns anything into raw material.

IVThe Larger Life Chapters 10–12

Beyond coping — giving that dissolves scarcity, the Higher Self that all the tools lead back to, and the patience that lets it all take root.

Part I distills the insights most worth remembering. Part II turns them into a three-phase practice. The final page is a quick reference you can keep at hand.

PART I · IMPORTANT INSIGHTS

MOVEMENT I

The Anatomy of Fear

Chapters 1–3

What fear actually is — the three levels beneath every surface story, the five truths that end the waiting game, and the shift from pain to power.

01 Every fear is the same fear: “I can't handle it”

THE IDEA

Fear operates on three levels. Level one is the surface story — things that happen (illness, loss, aging) and things requiring action (career change, public speaking, asserting yourself). Level two is the ego — rejection, failure, success, vulnerability — inner states that contaminate every area of life. Level three is the root: the belief that you can't handle whatever life brings.

WHY IT MATTERS

If all fear reduces to self-mistrust, you never have to control the outside world — your mate, boss, kids, or the market — to be free of fear. You only have to build trust in your ability to handle what comes.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Jeffers's fear class: Don the would-be artist, Sarah leaving a 15-year marriage, Kevin terrified of asking for a date, Richard fearing retirement — wildly different stories, and as each spoke, the room's tension dissolved. Underneath, one fear.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Whenever you feel afraid, translate it: this means I'm not trusting myself enough yet — then use a tool to build yourself up. The task is always the same task.

REMEMBER THIS

“Whatever happens, I'll handle it.”

02 The Five Truths About Fear

THE IDEA

1. The fear never goes away as long as you keep growing. 2. The only way to get rid of the fear of doing something is to go do it. 3. The only way to feel better about yourself is to go do it. 4. Everyone feels fear on unfamiliar territory — everyone. 5. Pushing through fear is less frightening than living with the underlying fear that comes from helplessness.

WHY IT MATTERS

These truths kill the “when-then” game — when I'm less afraid, then I'll act; when I feel better about myself, then I'll try. The order of reality runs the other way: doing comes first, confidence second.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Janice built a life of total safety around her husband Dick — then his stroke at 53 flipped her from taken-care-of to caretaker overnight. On the far side she found a peace she'd never known, and realized her “safe” life had been saturated with silent dread. Her what-if finally had an answer: I'll handle it.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Stop waiting to feel ready. Interpret fear as a green light — evidence you're on new territory — not a signal to retreat. Say the five truths ten times a day for a month.

REMEMBER THIS

“The doing comes before the fear goes away.”

03 Fear isn't the problem — how you hold it is

THE IDEA

Everyone feels fear, yet some act anyway. The difference is position: power (choice, energy, action) versus pain (helplessness, depression, paralysis). Power here means power within — over your perceptions, reactions, and actions — never power over others. Draw the pain-to-power chart, pin your position, and move the pin with action.

WHY IT MATTERS

Once you hold fear from power, the fact that fear exists becomes irrelevant. And real inner power makes you more loving, not less — people without it spend their lives trying to pull it out of everyone else.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Two widows, same loss, same thin finances. Joan wore the tragedy, repelled her friends, and proved her own doom. Mary mourned, then turned volunteer fundraising experience into a job — and ran the department within two years.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Before any action, ask: is this moving me toward power or pain? Build the vocabulary to match — I won't, not I can't; I could, not I should; it's an opportunity, not a problem; I know, not I hope; a learning experience, never "terrible."

REMEMBER THIS

"Move yourself from pain to power — the fear becomes irrelevant."

04 Expand your comfort zone daily

THE IDEA

Each of us operates inside an invisible boundary of what feels right — what we'll spend, whom we'll approach, what we'll ask for. Jeffers prescribes one risk a day: a small or bold stroke that widens the zone. Plan it the night before; visualize doing it.

WHY IT MATTERS

Every risk taken — win or lose — moves you right on the pain-to-power chart and compounds your self-trust. The magnitude of what you can attempt grows with the zone.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Call the person who intimidates you. Ask for the larger raise. Book the trip alone. Jeffers's own post-divorce firsts — fixing the vacuum, hosting dinner alone — each tasted like an emerging self-confidence.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Excluded: physically dangerous acts and anything trampling others' rights — those move you toward pain because there's no self-respect in them. Only risks that build self-worth count.

REMEMBER THIS

"Take a risk a day."

PART I · IMPORTANT INSIGHTS

MOVEMENT II

Taking Back the Controls

Chapters 4–6

Reclaiming the inner controls — total responsibility for your experience of life, outtalking the chatterbox, and handling the people who liked the old you better.

05 You are the cause of your experience of life

THE IDEA

Not of everything that happens — of your reactions to everything that happens. Jeffers gives seven definitions of responsibility: never blame others; don't blame yourself; notice where you play victim; handle the chatterbox; find the payoffs that keep you stuck; decide what you want and act; and see the choices in every moment.

WHY IT MATTERS

Victims are powerless — blame hands your power to whatever you blame. The telltale signs you've given power away: anger, envy, self-pity, helplessness, impatience, obsessiveness, the urge to control others.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Jeffers's own “moan-and-groan society” — hours on the phone cataloging the jerks in her life — until she found the question that dissolves the anger: what am I not doing in my life that I'm blaming him for not doing for me?

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Payoff hunting becomes routine: Jean stayed in the hated job because it was safe and easy; Kevin stayed married five years past the end because the tie felt like home; Tanya stayed sick because illness earned attention. Name the payoff and the choice becomes real — all three moved once they saw it.

REMEMBER THIS

“Anger is the clue that I'm not taking responsibility.”

06 The Chatterbox holds the key to your fears

THE IDEA

The nonstop inner voice heralding doom, lack, and losing — the if-I-call-him spiral, the they-excluded-me-from-the-meeting spiral. Most people don't even notice it talking. It is the repository of every scrap of negative programming since birth.

WHY IT MATTERS

The chatterbox is why we can't sit alone in a quiet room — and it is the voice that reads every fear script. You don't silence it by insight; you replace it, sentence by sentence, with a loving inner voice.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Jeffers performs the spiral in class: if I call, I'm pushy; if I don't, he'll think I don't care; maybe he heard about Alan; I looked fat at lunch — the insanity we all recognize and rarely name.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

The program is outtalking: wake to inspiration, ten minutes of affirmations at the mirror, a news fast, the car as a temple of learning, booster affirmations all day, something kind at bedtime. Full-strength for a month before easing off.

REMEMBER THIS

“Outtalk your chatterbox.”

07 The subconscious believes what it hears — not what is true

THE IDEA

The arm experiment: a volunteer's extended arm resists pressure — until she repeats “I am a weak and unworthy person” ten times, and the arm drops instantly. Ten repetitions of “I am a strong and worthy person” and the arm can't be budged. Jeffers ran it blind, leaving the room while the class chose the words. Same result.

WHY IT MATTERS

Belief isn't required — the inner self doesn't judge true from false; it executes what it's fed. Every sentence you speak about yourself is an instruction. And over 90% of what we worry about never happens — negativity isn't even “realistic.”

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Positive thinking has a maintenance problem, like fitness: the Inside Edge group — full of best-selling self-help authors who know every technique — still meets at 6:15 a.m. weekly to stay motivated. If they need practice, so do you.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Affirmations become daily equipment: present tense (I am now handling all my fears), positively phrased, repeated until they outtalk the negative. Quotes on index cards everywhere. And no denial — real problems exist; positivity is the power boost that lets you handle them.

REMEMBER THIS

“Stop feeding yourself weakness — speak strength whether you believe it yet or not.”

08 When they don't want you to grow

THE IDEA

As you change, people accustomed to the old you — mates especially — may resist, sabotage, or sulk. It's their security talking. Audit your circle: do they support your growth or drag you down? Like attracts like; build a support system that includes people further along than you.

WHY IT MATTERS

Just when you need a cheering squad, you may face enemy troops — expecting this keeps it from shocking you back into old patterns. And Jeffers has never met anyone who chose growth over a relationship and regretted it.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Doris the agoraphobic — cured through laughter when she couldn't produce a panic attack on command — came to class angry: her husband Ted was sabotaging her. Underneath: threat, worry, and the fear she'd no longer need him. Her certainty that she'd never go back is what let Ted adjust — and become her biggest supporter.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Expect the pendulum syndrome in yourself — passive to obnoxious to healthy — and don't punish the wobble. Answer put-downs win-win: “Thank you for your concern, Mom — and I know whatever comes up, I'll handle it.” The less you need approval, the more you can love.

REMEMBER THIS

“When you rock the boat, someone will tell you to sit down. Keep rowing — kindly.”

PART I · IMPORTANT INSIGHTS

MOVEMENT III

Acting Without a Net

Chapters 7–9

The action frameworks — decisions you can't lose, a life too whole to be devastated, and the yes that turns anything into raw material.

09 The No-Lose Decision — both paths are right

THE IDEA

The no-win model stands at a choice point trying to predict and control the future, then second-guesses forever. The no-lose model sees two paths, A and B, each strewn with “goodies” — chances to learn, grow, and discover who you are — whatever the outcome. Since every what-if is answered by “I’ll handle it,” you cannot lose.

WHY IT MATTERS

Decision paralysis is one of the biggest fears keeping people stuck — the donkey starving between two bales of hay. By not choosing, you are choosing to starve.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Alex left law school after two years — tuition cut off by his father — worked construction, met his wife through a co-worker, funded his own psychology doctorate. The “wasted” years produced lifelong friends, self-reliance, and the discovery of what he didn’t want, which is as valuable as finding what you do.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Before deciding: focus on no-lose, do your homework by talking to growth-supporting people, set priorities, trust your impulses, lighten up. After: throw away the picture, accept total responsibility, and don’t protect — correct.

REMEMBER THIS

“Security is not having things — it’s handling things.”

10 Don't protect — correct (mistakes are impossible)

THE IDEA

A plane to Honolulu is off course 90% of the flight; its guidance system just keeps correcting, and it lands on target. Life works the same way — error, correct, error, correct. Confusion and dissatisfaction aren’t failures; they’re instruments telling you you’re off course.

WHY IT MATTERS

Clinging to a chosen path because you’ve “invested so much” is protecting, not committing. Why invest more in what no longer pays — with the quality of your life at stake?

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

The researcher who failed 200 times: “I never failed — I discovered 200 ways not to do something.” A .400 batting average — four hits in ten — is a champion’s performance. If you haven’t made a mistake lately, you haven’t left the airport.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Practice “it doesn’t really matter” on small choices — which restaurant, which movie — and let the muscle grow toward the big ones. Shift from fearing mistakes to fearing their absence.

REMEMBER THIS

“Every mistake is curriculum. Correct course; don’t defend it.”

11 The Whole-Life Grid — nine boxes, not one big letter

THE IDEA

Louise: “Jim was my whole life” — so his leaving emptied the square. Draw the square as nine boxes instead: relationship, work, family, friends, hobby, leisure, alone time, personal growth, contribution. Lose one box and life still feeds you from eight.

WHY IT MATTERS

Total dependency on one source — a person, a career, the kids — breeds clinging, jealousy, control, and the terror of loss. Wholeness is the structural cure for neediness: you can't fear losing everything when nothing is everything.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Sandy's "temporary" job bored her senseless — until she tried the Magic Duo: 100% commitment plus acting as if she counted. A plant, a painting, daily goals, genuine helpfulness — within a week she was doubling her output and enjoying the job. Participating 100% eliminates boredom.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Daily goals drawn from every box, not just work. Commitment doesn't mean forever — Jeffers spent two fully-committed years engineering her own smooth exit from the Floating Hospital. And schedule the Holly Hour: one guilt-free hour of leisure daily.

REMEMBER THIS

"Commit 100% wherever you are — and act as if you count."

12 Say yes to your universe

THE IDEA

"Universe" means the flow you don't control — the events that interrupt your picture. Saying yes means nodding, relaxing the body, and asking what can be made of what happened. Saying no means fighting, collapsing, playing victim. Yes includes saying yes to pain — letting it in full force, trusting you'll reach the other side.

WHY IT MATTERS

Denial is deadly: Sandy never grieved her son's death; three years later epilepsy arrived, and nine years of seizures lifted within weeks of finally grieving in a support group. Unfelt pain converts into symptoms. And yes is not passivity — it means positive action; hopelessness is what paralyzes.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Charles — spine shattered in a street fight, paralyzed, hopeless — said yes at the rehab center's ultimatum and became the Floating Hospital's inspiration: teaching children, wheeling into the middle of a frozen seniors' party and starting the dancing. He came to call the injury a gift that showed him how much he had to give.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Train on trivia — the traffic jam, the spilled milk — so the reflex exists on the big days. Frankl is the outer proof: even in the camps, the last human freedom — choosing one's attitude — remained. If value could be created there, it can be created anywhere.

REMEMBER THIS

"Nod your head. There is the pain of yes and the pain of no — choose yes."

PART I · IMPORTANT INSIGHTS

MOVEMENT IV

The Larger Life

Chapters 10–12

Beyond coping — giving that dissolves scarcity, the Higher Self that all the tools lead back to, and the patience that lets it all take root.

13 Giving dissolves scarcity — and most of us have never done it

THE IDEA

Most “giving” is a hidden barter system — I’ll do this for you, you do this for me — run by the part of us that never left the crib. Fearful people can’t give because they feel scarcity: not enough love, money, praise to go around. The cure is the opposite of clutching: give away thanks, information, praise, time, money, love.

WHY IT MATTERS

The catch-22 is the whole teaching in miniature: it’s easy to give when you feel abundant, but you only feel abundant after you give. Feel the fear and do it anyway. And if your purpose is to give, it becomes almost impossible to be conned.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

The homework that stunned a class: go home and thank your spouse. Lottie, married 25 years — “he should be glad I’m there” — could barely do it. A week later the whole class had discovered they didn’t actually know how to give.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

The white-light exercise clears the deck: visualize the person you resent, wish them every good thing, daily, until the anger drains — Jeffers’s hour of screaming, crying, and finally peace over a betrayal, then a healing lunch with her ex-husband. Start the Book of Abundance: 150 entries, then daily — the anti-diary of what you have.

REMEMBER THIS

“The trick in life is not what you can get, but what you can give.”

14 The Higher Self — and the model of the mind

THE IDEA

The conscious mind takes dictation from one of two sources: the chatterbox (all the negative programming since birth) or the Higher Self (creativity, intuition, trust, love, joy). It passes orders to the subconscious — which doesn’t judge — and the subconscious executes, in the body, the feelings, and (Jeffers argues) the universal energy, where like attracts like.

WHY IT MATTERS

The restlessness we medicate with new jobs, houses, and mates is what Assagioli called divine homesickness — distance from this place within. Connected to something bigger, you no longer face life alone: trust in yourself plus trust in your universe is the final answer to “I can’t handle it.”

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

Intuition is the subconscious reporting back: a message said “go to the New School” — a place Jeffers had no connection to. She obeyed, announced to a stranger that she was there to teach a course on fear, and the stranger was the department head with a catalog deadline that day. Twelve minutes later the fear class existed.

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

Under pressure, center yourself with the protocol: this job / house / person is not my life; if it’s meant to be mine, it will be; I let go and turn it over; it’s all happening perfectly. Make the Higher Self a permanent grid box — first appointment of the morning — because it feeds every other box.

REMEMBER THIS

“Tuned to the chatterbox: I need, I’m afraid. Tuned to the Higher Self: I trust, I have so much.”

15 There is plenty of time

THE IDEA

Impatience is self-punishment — it creates stress, dissatisfaction, and fear. There are quick and wonderful seminars, but no quick tools; these are practiced for a lifetime. Growth is invisible while it's happening: the boy watching the flower pot, the log that sits flameless on the embers — until flame suddenly bursts out.

WHY IT MATTERS

There are only two kinds of experiences: those from the Higher Self (pure joy) and those with something to teach (struggle) — and both are perfect. That frame takes the victim out of every situation.

STRONGEST EXAMPLE

The mountain climb: hard going, but every pause shows a more spectacular view — and from higher up, even cruel people are visibly more than their behavior. Jeffers keeps herself humble with Lena Horne's line: "I've come a long way — maybe."

WHAT IT CHANGES IN PRACTICE

When the chatterbox rushes you, answer: what's the rush? It's all happening perfectly. Nothing takes unless you take it — the muscle that lifts you to the Higher Self weakens when unused. Participate, act, sign up. Joy — using your powers to their fullest — is the goal, and the you that could be is colossal.

REMEMBER THIS

"It's all happening perfectly — and there is plenty of time."

PART II

THE ACTION GUIDE

REWIRE · ACT · EXPAND

Three phases, twelve practices. Phase One retrains the mind. Phase Two moves you into risk and decision. Phase Three builds the life too whole to be devastated.

PHASE ONE · REWIRE

Daily mind training — the first 30 days

1.1 Say the Five Truths ten times a day

WHAT TO DO

Recite all five fear truths, out loud when possible, at least ten times daily for one month. Post them where you'll see them.

WHEN TO USE IT

Every day, starting today — especially the moment you catch yourself playing when-then.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

The belief that fear must go away before you can act.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

You start reading fear as a green light — proof you're growing — instead of a stop sign.

CAUTION

Knowing the truths is not enough; without repetition the old wiring wins.

1.2 Run the Beginner's Intensive — outtalk the chatterbox

WHAT TO DO

Wake to inspirational audio, do ten minutes of present-tense affirmations at the mirror, skip the news, turn the commute into listening time, take affirmation booster shots all day, and end with something calming at bedtime.

WHEN TO USE IT

Full-strength for at least one month before easing into maintenance.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

The nonstop inner voice of doom, lack, and losing that reads every fear script.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

The positive voice becomes the norm and the chatterbox the rarity; energy rises noticeably.

CAUTION

If you miss a day, don't let the chatterbox scold you — answer with "I'm doing it all perfectly." And no denial: positivity handles problems, it doesn't pretend they're gone.

1.3 Install the pain-to-power vocabulary

WHAT TO DO

Swap the weak words: I can't → I won't. I should → I could. It's a problem → it's an opportunity. I hope → I know. If only → next time. It's terrible → it's a learning experience. What will I do? → I'll handle it.

WHEN TO USE IT

In every sentence, starting with how you decline a dinner invitation.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

The subconscious registers "weak, weak, weak" every time you speak like a victim — and obliges.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

Your presence changes; people treat inner strength differently because it's actually there.

CAUTION

This feels like trivia. It is not — the arm experiment is the proof.

1.4 Put the pain-to-power chart on the wall

WHAT TO DO

Draw one line, PAIN on the left, POWER on the right. Pin your honest position. Check and move the pin daily. Before acting, ask: does this move me toward power?

WHEN TO USE IT

Set it up tonight; consult it before decisions.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

Drifting through days with no reading on whether you're gaining or giving away power.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

The pin moves right — by your own inner gauge of peace and growth, no one else's.

CAUTION

If you act toward pain anyway, don't rage at yourself — just notice, and choose differently next time.

PHASE TWO · ACT

Risk, responsibility, and decisions — weeks 2–8

2.1 Take a risk a day

WHAT TO DO

One daily act that stretches the comfort zone: the intimidating phone call, the bigger ask, the meal alone in the nice restaurant. Plan tomorrow's risk each night and visualize doing it.

WHEN TO USE IT

Daily; also on the spot whenever you catch yourself hesitating.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

A comfort zone that quietly shrinks your life to what feels safe.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

The zone widens; the magnitude of risks you can attempt grows; self-trust compounds.

CAUTION

No physically dangerous acts, nothing that tramples others — only risks that build self-worth.

2.2 Hunt your payoffs

WHAT TO DO

Pick the place you're most stuck. List every payoff for staying: what you don't have to face, do, or risk; what comfort or image you keep. If you can't see them, ask a friend — they usually can.

WHEN TO USE IT

Whenever you've complained about the same thing three times.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

Perpetuating what you say you don't want — the job, the limbo, the illness pattern.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

Like Jean, Kevin, and Tanya: once the payoff is named, the choice gets made, fast.

CAUTION

Expect resistance — payoffs hide because they work. Honesty here is the whole exercise.

2.3 Run decisions through the No-Lose protocol

WHAT TO DO

Before: focus on no-lose (both paths are right), do your homework by talking widely, set priorities, trust your impulses, lighten up. After: throw away the picture, accept total responsibility, don't protect — correct.

WHEN TO USE IT

Every significant decision — and practice on trivial ones with “it doesn't really matter.”

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

Decision paralysis and the post-decision second-guessing spiral.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

Choices get made and corrected without agony; confusion and dissatisfaction become instruments, not verdicts.

CAUTION

Talk only to people who support your growth — first time, shame on them; second time, shame on you. And “correct” is not flitting: commit fully until the evidence says change.

2.4 One week without complaining

WHAT TO DO

Seven days: no criticizing anyone, no complaining about anything. When you slip, notice what the complaint was protecting you from owning.

WHEN TO USE IT

Schedule it this month; repeat quarterly.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

The moan-and-groan society — the griping habit that keeps the victim story alive.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

You discover how much airtime complaint was consuming — and what you learn about yourself in the silence.

CAUTION

It will be far harder than it sounds; that difficulty is the data.

PHASE THREE · EXPAND

Wholeness, yes, and giving — the ongoing practice

3.1 Build the nine-box Whole-Life Grid

WHAT TO DO

Divide your life into nine boxes (relationship, work, family, friends, hobby, leisure, alone time, personal growth, contribution — plus the Higher Self as a permanent box). Visualize each box at its best; list the actions; set daily goals from every box.

WHEN TO USE IT

Build it this week; feed it with daily goals thereafter.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

One big letter in the middle of the square — total dependency on a person, career, or role.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

A loss leaves a hole, not a wipe-out; neediness fades because life feeds you from many sources.

CAUTION

Apply the Magic Duo everywhere — 100% commitment plus acting as if you count — or the boxes stay theoretical. Commitment doesn't mean forever; it means all-in while you're there.

3.2 Practice yes on trivia

WHAT TO DO

At the traffic jam, the spilled milk, the late friend: catch the no, physically nod your head, relax your body head to toe, and ask what can be learned or used here.

WHEN TO USE IT

Every minor frustration — that's the training ground for the major ones.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

The automatic no-reflex that turns everything unplanned into victimhood.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

The yes reflex exists when it matters — loss, illness, endings — and pain gets felt and crossed, not buried.

CAUTION

Yes is not passivity, and it doesn't skip grief — denial converts pain into symptoms. Let pain in full force.

3.3 Give something away daily

WHAT TO DO

Rotate the giveaways: thanks (start with your spouse), praise, information, time, money. Use the white-light exercise on anyone you resent. Start the Book of Abundance — 150 entries, then daily additions of what you have.

WHEN TO USE IT

One deliberate giveaway a day; white-light work until the resentment drains.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

The scarcity crouch — clutching love, money, and credit like the last water in the desert.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

Abundance becomes noticeable because you're generating it; fear of lack loosens its grip.

CAUTION

Give with no expectation of return — giving-to-get is a con with extra steps. And giving is not doormat service: you're entitled to have your needs met.

3.4 Morning Higher-Self appointment

WHAT TO DO

Start each day in the Higher-Self box: quiet, affirmations, inspirational reading or audio, or a guided visualization of yourself approaching your goal with no fear. At night, hand open problems to your subconscious and let go.

WHEN TO USE IT

First thing every morning — it sets the day and feeds every other box.

THE PROBLEM IT ADDRESSES

Divine homesickness — the emptiness we misdiagnose as needing a new job, house, or mate.

WHAT SUCCESS LOOKS LIKE

Centering gets faster; intuition gets louder; "it's all happening perfectly" stops being a slogan.

CAUTION

Skip the practice and the muscle weakens — the pros still meet at 6:15 a.m. There is no graduation.

QUICK REFERENCE

THE FIVE TRUTHS ABOUT FEAR

1. The fear will never go away as long as I continue to grow.
2. The only way to get rid of the fear of doing something is to go out and do it.
3. The only way to feel better about myself is to go out and do it.
4. Everyone feels fear on unfamiliar territory — everyone.
5. Pushing through fear is less frightening than living with helplessness.

THE NO-LOSE DECISION

Before: Focus on no-lose · Do your homework · Set priorities · Trust your impulses · Lighten up

After: Throw away the picture · Accept total responsibility · Don't protect — correct

SAYING YES — FIVE STEPS

Notice the no · Nod your head · Relax the body · Find the value · Be patient

PAIN-TO-POWER VOCABULARY

I can't	→ I won't
I should	→ I could
It's not my fault	→ I'm totally responsible
It's a problem	→ It's an opportunity
I hope	→ I know
If only	→ Next time
It's terrible	→ It's a learning experience
What will I do?	→ I'll handle it

THE WHOLE-LIFE GRID

Relationship	Work	Family
Friends	Hobby	Leisure
Alone time	Personal growth	Contribution / Higher Self

“Feel the fear — and do it anyway. Whatever happens, I'll handle it.”